FIND VAST RESERVE OF NATURAL GAS IN STATE

Deposit Definitely Established in Northeastern Section of Pennsylvania

BEYOND SPECULATION

By John W. Scotzin
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, May 5.—(INS)—The presence of a vast reserve of natural gas in northeastern Pennsylvania was definitely established in a topographical survey just completed by the Department of Internal Affairs.

Although geological circles may have been aware of this previously, the structural reconnaissance comes as a boon to the industry since it segregated suitable sites for prospecting from an area hitherto drilled haphazardly. S. H. Cathcart, senior geologist, told International News Service.

"This survey takes the game of prospecting out of the pure realm of gambling and more or less puts it in the field of a speculative investment," Cathcart said.

Cathcart's survey covered 12,000 square miles of plateau regions, extending from northern Clearfield, Elk and McKean counties to the Delaware River. As a result he determined about 35 suitable localities for prospecting.

His conviction that gas can be produced on a marketable basis in the northern tier counties is based on the presence of Oriskany sand there. This type of sand yields all the gas produced in western Pennsylvania.

"The northeastern Pennsylvania area is practically a virgin field as far as Oriskany sand is concerned," Cathcart declared.

However, production of natural gas on a large scale in northeastern Pennsylvania will probably be delayed for years, Cathcart believes. The huge expenditure entailed in prospecting together with the present great supply in the western Pennsylvania fields, will tend to discourage early attempts at extensive drilling of wells in the new field, he said.

"It is always desirable to find new fields in order to insure a reserve for this large market," Cathcart pointed out. "The cost of marketing is tremendous but the problem is to continue the supply."

"How long the present reserves will last is problematical."

Cathcart emphasized that the Oriskany sand is not present everywhere. This formation, he said, runs east and south of the plateau region in the state and disappears in some localities. The condition of the sand itself is an important factor which must be considered before prospecting attempts are made.

"The oil and gas industry," he said, "is not the 'gold mine' it is popularly supposed to be. In past years, wells were dug haphazardly, resulting in dry holes and a total loss to the driller."

"Nothing has ever been invented to determine oil or gas reserves underground without digging. All wells of today are dug only after suitable sites have been located under geological surveys."

BUCKS COUNTY TUBERCULOSIS SOCIETY

Pushes Forward Its Health
Program in All Sections

ACTIVE FOR 15 YEARS

Finances Are Received From
Sale of Tiny Christmas
Seals

By Staff Reporter

Its great program of health work financed entirely by sale of Christmas Seals, the Bucks County Tuberculosis Society has steadily forged ahead during the past 15 years, with its scope of work gradually becoming larger and its "healing powers" being felt in all sections of the county.

The tiny Christmas seals, sold at one cent each, for a period between the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays, were previously sold by school children, but now the sales are conducted entirely by mail. The list of individuals to whom the seals are forwarded is increased annually, and the addressee is to forward money for the amount of the seals, or is privileged to return part or all of the seals as desired. An addressed envelope for return of money or seals is enclosed with the cheery seals which mean so much for those threatened with or suffering from tuberculosis.

The first president of the Bucks County Tuberculosis Society was Dr. William S. Erdman, Buckingham, who recently died. His successor will be chosen at the next annual meeting which will occur at Doylestown on Monday, June 11th.

The office of the executive secretary of the association, Mrs. Emma C. Stover, was until recently located in the Hart building, but is now at the Stover residence, 304 East Court street.

Serving as other officers of the association are: Vice president, Dr. Carmon Ross, Doylestown; treasurer, J. Purdy Weiss, Doylestown; secretary, Mrs. Edward Blackfan, Doylestown. The office of executive secretary is an appointive one. Other officers are chosen for a term of one year.

Among the duties of the executive secretary is to locate individuals believed to have tuberculosis, take them to a chest clinic, and if found necessary have them listed for sanatoria. There are two chest clinics within the confines of Bucks County, one at Bristol and another at Quakertown. The

EXPLAINS INSTRUCTIONS FOR MEDICAL SERVICE

Believe Less Complaint Will Be Caused If Rules Are Known

MAKES LETTER PUBLIC

Despite explanations which have been given at great length, there still appears to be considerable misunderstanding concerning just what medical and dental service is given under the Emergency Relief program.

Anthony Russo, today, released for publication, copy of instructions which the local relief office has just received. "If those on relief were more familiar with the rules and regulations, the relief workers would be saved many arguments and there would be less mis-understanding," states Mr. Russo. The instructions follow:

COMMONWEALTH OF
STATE EMERGENCY RELIEF
BOARD
HARRISBURG

May 1, 1934.
TO: ALL PHYSICIANS, DENTISTS, DIRECTORS OF RELIEF, SUPERVISORS OF CASE WORKERS.

FROM: HAROLD A. MILLER, M. D.,
DIRECTOR OF MEDICAL RELIEF.

May I call your attention to the following paragraph in the Rules and Regulations which seem to cause confusion and misunderstanding:

"Such authorized (medical) service shall be a MINIMUM consistent with good professional judgment, and shall be charged for at an agreed rate which makes due allowance for the conservation of relief funds."

Your patient has no right to expect or demand of you services beyond that necessary to make him reasonably comfortable and to insure recovery, where possible. It is a MINIMUM service, not MAXIMUM or even average.

"The common aim should be the provision of good medical service at a low cost—to the mutual benefit of the unemployed relief beneficiary, physician, nurse, dentist, pharmacist, and taxpayer."

Only emergency treatment is permissible without a medical order. In such emergency cases report to the Relief Director by telephone or secure from the patient a written request for the medical order and deliver it to the Director of Relief promptly. If mailed, the date stamped by the receiving post office is the date and time of notice.

The local director of emergency relief should inform the individual (or agent) for whom the order is issued the limitations of the service. That medical orders are not orders for twenty dollars, but only cover the irreducible medical service necessary for the ailment of which the patient complains.

That dental orders are not orders for ten dollars worth of dental service, but only good for MINIMUM emergency work which is necessary at the time. Potential future troubles are not within the scope of the emergency relief program.

Physicians must follow their usual practice in supplying drugs. Prescriptions for USP and NF drugs may be written when and where necessary, but doctors are instructed to investigate when two or more prescriptions are used for the individual. Refills by the patients are not permitted.

The family is the unit (one medical order) for medical relief; exceptions, dental work, one first tooth, limit ten dollars, and obstetrics.

Indigents who have in the past received their medical attention from local poor directors or other local agencies, must continue to receive their medical attention from such sources. They do not come under the Rules and Regulations. "It shall imply continuance in the use of hospitals, clinics, and medical, dental, and nursing services already established in the community and paid for, in whole or in part, from local and/or State funds, in accordance with local statutes or charter provisions."

Local directors and physicians (including dentists) must cooperate in giving the community medical care adequate for emergency needs, but at a cost consistent with the spirit of co-operation between the taxpayer, physician, and relief worker.

PROMISED "PUNCH IN JAW"

London, England, May 5.—Because he declared King Albert was assassinated and not the victim of an accident when he died in a mountain fall several weeks ago, Lt. "The story that he fell over a precipice on that mountain near Nomur was the biggest piece of spoof put over on the world in the last six months," he continued.

WOMEN TOLD OF GREAT LOSS IN FOREST FIRES

State Chairman of Conservation, Federation of Women's Clubs, Speaks Here

BEFORE TRAVEL CLUB

When a program was presented by the Garden Section of the Travel Club at the club home yesterday afternoon, the women were honored in having as the speaker, Mrs. Abraham B. Ross, state chairman of conservation, Federation of Women's Clubs. The program which followed a brief business meeting, was in charge of Mrs. Earl Tomb, chairman of the local garden section.

Mrs. Ross spoke in grave tones of the destruction of the forests in the United States, telling that in 1929, the last year in which figures were compiled, there were 28 million acres of forest land destroyed by fires. The majority of the fires, she informed, were caused by carelessness on the part of hunters and campers, who failed to put camp-fires out, or who carelessly threw away cigar or cigarette stubs. The trees and underbrush being dry, the sparks are quickly fanned into a conflagration. The loss in that period, according to Mrs. Ross averaged $100,000 per day.

The speaker told the women that last year $2,000,000 were spent in Pennsylvania on Christmas trees and other greens for decoration at the Yuletide season, the greater part of this money being spent in Canada. This it was brought out is unnecessary in view of the fact that the state has foresters clear out small evergreens to benefit the forest, and these can be purchased. Such trees have government tags attached.

The wild flower preserve which is to be located at Bowmans Hill, Washington Crossing, was spoken of, this to be in charge of Dr. Wherry of the Botanical Department of the University of Pennsylvania. The menace of the Dutch elm disease was referred to, and the state officer mentioned that Boy Scouts will assist in this fight. The disease is carried by the elm beetle, and many Scouts will endeavor to stamp out these beetles.

Vocal solos by Percy G. Ford were "Perfect Day," and "Nothing."

A plant exchange followed the program. The business session was directed by the president, Mrs. Theodore B. Megargee; and hostesses were Mrs. Emil Metzger and Mrs. Lester B. Shoemaker.

It has been a long time since an epidemic of this kind has broken out here. At the April meeting of the health board it was noted that there had not been a case of any communicable disease for over 10 months.

WHEAT PLAN FAILS

A severe blow has been given the government's crop control program in the official figures showing the indicated winter wheat yield.

The estimates, based on the condition of the crop in April, are for a probable yield of 492,000,000 bushels. This compares with 351,000,000 bushels last year and represents a gain of 141,000,000 bushels. For Kansas alone, a total production of 127,000,000 bushels is indicated. This would be an increase of 67,600,000 bushels over the 1933 yield.

Of course, much can happen between now and harvest time. Nature sometimes takes a hand in such things and upsets all forecasts. Notwithstanding this possibility, the wheat control plan must be written down as a failure. It did not prevent the planting of increased acreage, as it was supposed to do.

The plan was voluntary, the government submitting a domestic allotment program and paying bonuses to farmers for reducing acreage, and, in addition, levying a processing tax payable by consumers as a further aid to reduction.

Many wheat growers accepted the proposal. Many others, however, did not and increased their acreage. Some farmers who had given up wheat growing as unprofitable returned to it in the expectation that government intervention would mean much higher prices.

CAVALRY ON WAY OUT

Abolition of the cavalryman's saber as an outmoded weapon of war is forecast by the war department in an order that sabers be stored.

This move represents a logical development in the rapid mechanization of the army, where machines are taking the place of men as they are doing in the industrial world.

Dashing charges by mounted troops and spectacular hand-to-hand fighting will have little if any part in future wars. They had practically no part in the World War. The chief fighting done by cavalrymen in that conflict was done on the ground.

The diminishing importance of cavalry has been recognized by the United States which has unhorse several units. Further mechanization of this branch of the army is taking place.

That mounted troops eventually will disappear entirely seems not an illogical conclusion. The saber has gone, and the horse and rider appear destined to follow it.

RELIGIOUS SERVICES ARE ANNOUNCED FOR THE BRISTOL CHURCHES FOR SUNDAY AND THROUGHOUT THE COMING WEEK

St. James's P. E. Church

Services for Sunday: 8 a. m., Holy Communion; 9:30 a. m., Church School; 10:45, morning prayer and sermon; 7:45, evening prayer and confirmation service.

The Rt. Rev. Francis M. Tait, D. D., will be present Sunday evening and preach the sermon and administer the rite of confirmation. This is the bishop's annual visit to the parish.

Thursday, Ascension Day, there will be a celebration of Holy Communion in the church at 9:30 a. m.

"During 1933," states the pastor, practically no repairs were made to the church property, due to the lack of funds. As a result there are certain much-needed repairs to be made at present, but the finances of the church will not permit them. The vestry is endeavoring to enlist all the communicants in the support of the church, for at present more than half of the communicants are not giving anything toward the support of the church. This is a matter that everyone should give serious thought, for even a small amount each week from every communicant would amply provide sufficient money for all the necessary expenditures. There are some present contributors too, who could probably increase their contributions a small amount. Personal calls are being made by the vestrymen and it is hoped all will do their utmost to provide for necessary maintenance of the church."

Harrison M. E. Church

10 a. m., Sunday School, William H. Wilkinson, superintendent; 11, morning worship; 6:45 p. m., Juniors meet in the basement under direction of J. Arnold Neuman; Seniors meet in the church, under leadership of Furman Miles; 7:45, evening worship, the Rev. G. W. Shires, pastor.

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1934, King Features Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD, Cal.,
Departing here after several lectures on styles, Irene Castle McLaughlin makes a pronouncement that will startle the world of cinema and society.

She names Genevieve Tobin as the best dressed woman in California. The choice is dramatic because so unexpected. The blonde Miss Tobin, stage and screen star, has been recognized as one of the smartly groomed women of the film colony, but no previous authority has picked her even among the first five of the cinema fashion-plates.

Mrs. McLaughlin, however, is very emphatic. After visiting Genevieve on the "Kiss and Makeup" set at Paramount, she said:

"In my opinion, Miss Tobin is the best dressed woman in California. If there is to be an actress to fill the 'best dressed woman' spot vacated by the passing of Lilyan Tashman, then Genevieve Tobin by all means is elected."

Which should certainly start a fine argument in this gossip town of ours.

Appearing with Mrs. Patrick Campbell in "The Green Hat," the distinguished actress gave him his start six years ago in "The Matron." A callow juvenile at the time, Williams was in a state of muscle-bound hysteria when the company finally lined up for curtain calls on the opening night. He got the shock of his life when the voice of the star came hissing to his ears:

"Bow, boy, bow, you look like a butler!"

Coincidence has just pulled one of its weirdest tricks in Mobile, Alabama. The picture "Death Takes a Holiday" opened on a Friday morning in the Saenger theater in that Southern city. Believe it or not, from then until the film closed on Sunday night, not a single person died in the town. The local papers front-paged it in boxes and Merlin Manson, motion picture editor of the Press Register, relays the news to the Paramount studio.

By the latest census, Mobile has a population of 68,202.

The tirelessly active Lupa Velez has invented the formula for a sun-tan powder, which requires no cold-cream foundation and which stays on the face all day. She is leaving Hollywood Monday on a personal appearance tour and, upon her return, expects to arrange for the manufacture and marketing of the preparation.

Los Angeles, Adolphe Menjou tells me, presents the most difficult problem in the world for the well-dressed man. It is a city in the country. It is a winter and summer resort town and, due to the climate, summer sport clothes might be worn all year round.

"Derby hats are unthinkable here," he says. "Walking canes are almost as inappropriate. Even morning coats have a touch of affectation." The star believes that gray blacks and tweed coats, as loud as you like, are the best all-around combination for day wear. And he grins to remember how he and Gary Cooper were hooted for introducing the loud jackets so popular in England.

KNICK-KNACKS—

Charlie Farrell and some of the more rabid polo fans own miniature mallets and go walking around the sidewalks of Hollywood swinging at pieces of paper and pebbles. . . . Actors on a set for "Cleopatra" sweltered because they had to keep the temperature of the stage above 86 to prevent 126 ostrich plumes from moulting. . . . Al Jolson's new place in Seaside, N. Y., will have large vegetable gardens. . . . Strikes me as Mae West has inspired more jokes than anything since the early Ford. . . . Grover Jones described the diminutive Bayard Veiller as the lower half of Bill McNutt. . . . Although his wife, Frances Braggiotti, is a noted dancer, John Lodge takes lessons from a teacher in Santa Monica. . . . Cameraman Oliver Marsh has photographed "The Merry Widow" three times, an old two-reeler, the John Gilbert-Mae Murray silent version and now the M.G.M. talkie.

DID YOU KNOW—

That Miriam Hopkins has broken her left ankle twice and her right one once during her stage and screen career?

How Will Your GARDEN GROW?

FOR many of us who have only dabbled in the soil, a bright row of fragrant flowers will always hold the greater charm, yet there are good reasons why the kitchen garden is winning a place in the sun.

A foremost industrialist says that home-grown vegetables are an economic need; a correspondence school is teaching how to make the backyard garden pay; and the producers and purveyors of garden accessories are making it easier for you to coax from the good earth either hunger-satisfying foods or blooms that fill the soul.

Read the advertisements in this newspaper for up-to-the-minute gardening news. They supplement the information provided by our own writers; they feature new implements or new services and tell you where to secure most of the things the modern garden needs.

The advertisements in this newspaper are signed by merchants and manufacturers who have reputations for fine quality, fair prices and square dealing. The things they sell will help you save money and have more success with your garden.

"THE LOWE WOLFSON"

by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

CHAPTER XL

In some chagrin Lanyard crossed to the window-doors. Black night pricked with a myriad of man-made stars met and defeated eyes keyed to indoor illumination. He pushed the wings farther apart and stepped out. But the dusky terrace with its array of outdoor furniture and plants in tubs drooped all deserted.

He lost a minute there, less in disappointment or disorientation than in marveling on the sight that opened beyond the ruled black lip of the parapet, the spangled spread of urban night, patterned in lights like a vast shield, infernally lurid at its midtown boss with lines of fading gleam radiating in untraceable confusion to the far shimmer of its broken silver rim. And to every light that burned below, a hundred hearts that beat in love and sorrow, despair and hope.

And somewhere, near one of them, his son and, perhaps, Fenno. With a gesture of frustration Lanyard turned back, only halting to peer up to the parapet of Isquith's terrace.

A glow beyond made this last a dense black mass—and proved, or seemed to prove, that the tenant of the upstairs premises was at home!

And Tess Boyce, no doubt, up there with him. No telling what they were scheming, between them, or how or when their designs would manifest in action!

Time to have another try for Crane by telephone; but Lanyard, moving quietly back to the drawing-room, was halted short of it by a little shake of throaty laughter in the hush overhead.

He stepped quickly aside and out of the light shed by the windows. In another breath something plopped on the tiles at his feet, fell and rested just inside the edge of the stencil of light.

The shagreen-bound case of the Habsburg emeralds!

Something else fell from immediately above Lanyard's head the next instant, but only to his ears—a feminine cry of vexation.

"I've gone and dropped the damn thing."

"Well, don't worry." The amused injunction was unmistakably by its mannered accent, Isquith's. "You'll find it down there, all right, waiting for you."

"I know. But it makes me mad. I'm all the time dropping things. Why is it?"

"Your amazing nervous energy, little one, your impatience that is always trying to make a gesture do instead of a finished performance. Never mind; you have virtues that make up for your failings."

"I've got what?"

"Sterling qualities, then—if you must quibble."

"That's more like it. I thought for a minute you were trying to make up to me. Gave me quite a turn."

"It ought to—when or if ever. Easy now! Don't go romping down that ladder as if it was a staircase. If you let go of that, butterfingers, next thing you know they'll be scraping you up off the Avenue with a trowel."

"Not a chance. I think more of my life than I do of any mess of jewels."

"But give a thought to me, dear. If you break your pretty neck, you know, I can always get another rest of my life without another shot at the Habsburg emeralds."

"You don't have to tell me. That's the way it is with you men, always—selfish beasts! Just for that, I'm going to keep tight hold and disappoint you."

The diffused light picked up sullen ankles upon a spidery iron ladder that linked the terraces at a point to one side of the windows—between two of which hugging the wall like a lizard, Lanyard waited.

The shagreen case now lay, not where it had first fallen but squarely in the middle of the lighted area—far enough away to minimize the risk of her becoming aware of his presence, there in the darkness, when she paused to retrieve it.

"All very entertaining, my dear, I'm sure. The light shone bright on how well Isquith fancied himself as the most polished of swell mobsmen. "But persiflage is a trifle out of place just now, don't you think, when we haven't got all night to do our stuff in; when we've got less than half of it left, as a matter of fact, and no end of things to see to before morning? Shake a leg, won't you, like a good little girl?"

"Shaking two of them, aren't I? And fine ones, if anyone should ask you."

The Boyce finished her descent, and with a clatter of pointed heels, passed so near to Lanyard that her garments all but brushed him.

"All right; you needn't have your heart in your mouth any more, ducky—I'm down, safe and sound."

"And the emeralds?"

The woman in a twinkling located the shagreen case, and in one swift sweep possessed herself of it.

"O. K.!" she gaily called to the man above—cutting a slightly shape against the milk, alluring and well aware of it, with the lamplight from indoors softening the garish scheme of a cynically insufficient negligee.

But as Lanyard viewed her, it was all beauté du diable, no better. And when he heard what she said next, he told himself he could have throttled her where she stood with one quail of conscience.

"Fair enough," Isquith called down. "But cut out that show-girl stuff, now, gorgeous; keep it for tomorrow, when this movie is all cleared up and everybody's happy but the families of the candidates for premature decease. Get busy with the wires—give Ladore a buzz and tell him to stand prepared to pay up like a prince first thing in the morning and take his old emeralds. What becomes of them after that's his business, all him; anyway, so far as we're concerned, it's nobody's."

"Leave him to me—I'll put him through the hoops, all right. He'll learn an awful lot about playing with two-edged tools before he's many days older. That's my job. Just see that you tend to yours as well; put the infant class to hy-hy-Park while they held a pow-wow. The fool had been spilling the beans—you know, bragging, like he always does when he gets his nose wet—and had let on that he was my brother and had the key to the apartment here. So the Lanyard kid doped it out that the way to get the emeralds back was to come here and lay for me, figuring that whoever had them would come in and hand them over as soon as I landed—just like it happened. He wanted the girl to go home and wait there while he turned the trick, but she wouldn't hear of it. She's nuts about the punk, according to Wally, and said she wasn't going to take any chances of Wally's pulling a comeback on him while the two of them were waiting for me, all alone here. She insisted on coming along to spell her sweetie, standing guard over Wally while he rested."

"They made themselves at home here, told my servant, when he turned up today, it was a false alarm about my coming back, and sent him packing—ordered up what they wanted from the restaurant and kept Wally covered in the bedroom while the waiters were in the place—never let him out of their sight a second. It wasn't until dinner tonight he could stage the comeback. He knew where I kept my pills and managed to lay hands on them and slip a couple into the coffee. When I came in, the two kids were out cold. They still are—doing a Rip van Winkle that looks like it would last a week."

"Now it's up to you to get that car here; then we'll lug them out and into it as plain drunks; then rest's your business. What? Say, what good would this place be to me if I didn't have every last rat on the staff on my pay-roll? I could get away with murder here if I had to; but it would mess up the premises too much; and when it comes to taking mugs for rides, you're the expert—Wait a shake."

Isquith broke off at this stage to look round in resentful wonder as Tess Boyce, flinging the wings of the window wide and herself in through them, offered a dramatic interruption.

"What the devil!"

PARIS NIGHT LIFE IS NOW SHOWING SIGNS OF REVIVAL

PARIS—(INS)—Parisian night life is showing signs of revival now that the trans-Atlantic steamers have brought in a few visitors from the land of the depreciated dollar. Among the first to welcome the arrivals was Brick Top in her Montmartre cabaret, all freshly painted a bright red with geraniums in the windows.

DESCRIBES COSTUME WORN BY SIAMESE QUEEN IN "PAREE"

By Nadia de Beaud
(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—The French always make a great fuss about visiting royalty, especially these days when the whole institution is in a bad way. This week the sovereign of Siam, King Prajapok and Queen Rambaiarni arrived on the Rome express and were met at the Lyons station by numerous French generals and M. Becq ed Fouquieres, Chief of Protocol.

The Queen, with lovely almond eyes that seemed to have been drawn with a fine brush, wore upon arrival a beige woolen coat, reaching almost to her ankles, with a huge fox collar. Her Majesty wore shoes to match. Her hat, placed solidly on her head, the brim turned up in front, barely showed her straight, shiny black hair.

SUNDAY DIAMOND TILTS ARE LOOKED FORWARD TO

Howard Black's Emilie A. A. team will inaugurate its baseball season tomorrow afternoon, meeting the strong Belfield A. C. of Philadelphia on the Emilie diamond.

Black will have almost the same line-up as last season when his club set up an enviable record on the Emilie field.

Belfield played Emilie twice last season and although beaten both times, put up a close fight on each occasion.

Game will begin at three o'clock sharp.

Going after their fourth straight victory, the Edgely Braves will entertain the Penrose A. C., of Philadelphia, tomorrow afternoon on the Edgely field.

The Braves have defeated Roebeling, St. Stanislaus, and Damp Wash A. A. and are out to add Penrose to their list of victims.

"Johnny" Harmsen will do the twirling for the Edgelyites with Dougherty behind the bat. The rest of the line-up will be intact with the exception of first base where Hunter will play in place of Hibbs.

Game is scheduled for three o'clock.

Rinehart A. C. will be the opponent of the Bristol White Elephants on the Bath Road diamond tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock.

The Elephants opened up last week-end and suffered a defeat at the hands of the Cubans and are out to redeem themselves at the expense of the Philadelphia team.

SPORT SHOTS
by Maxwell Gordon

WE received an interesting summary of the career of the late Budd Doble's wonder horse of harness racing, "Goldsmith Maid," from Dennis Ferry, of Washington street, who is a student of sports and their records. . . . Ferry found this information in a sports record book dedicated to Harry Raymond, of High Point, N. C.

Quote: Goldsmith Maid was the greatest horse of any breed ever foaled. Here is a story that challenges fiction because she was a farm animal until she was six, never raced until she was eight, and ran until she was twenty.

She won $364,200 during her lifetime . . . the record for any horse since records have been kept, and it must be remembered she was racing in the 60's and the 70's when purses were a pittance compared with the purses of today. John Decker, her original owner, thought the filly had racing ability and tried several times to teach her to trot . . . but she was hard to handle and repeatedly wrecked buggies, so Decker gave up the idea and the horse served on the farm as a work animal.

Alden Goldsmith bought the horse for $650 and quickly started teaching the filly to trot . . . after a lot of patient work on the part of the new owner the wild mare finally submitted to harness and swiftly developed into the greatest racer of the age.

In 1869 Budd Doble of Bristol, then a famous reinsman, purchased the horse for $20,000, a ridiculous price for a twelve-year-old horse. . . . Goldsmith thought he was making a smart deal for himself, getting that much for an ancient trotter . . . yet during the two years that followed, 1870 and 1871, "Goldsmith Maid" won more than $100,000 for Doble.

At the end of 1871 Doble thought that the mare had grown too old to be a racing tool much longer and sold the 15-year-old mare to H. N. Smith of Trenton for $37,000. . . . the smart folk of the day decided that Smith was crazy for paying such a sum for a horse of such an age, but Smith thought he was the real David Harum. History proved he was right — "Goldsmith Maid" earned more than $80,000 for Smith.

At twenty, this wonder horse was still winning . . . her speed, her stoutness of heart and her amazing stamina was unchanged by the years. She ended her campaign that year in a blaze of glory by some brilliant triumphs in stake events in Toledo, winning the last race of the meeting. She was then shipped East and on the way home took sick on the train and died a few days later of pneumonia. She was buried in Trenton.

Facing a Tough Task

By BURNLEY

ROSS WILL HAVE TO FIGHT OLD MAN TRADITION AS WELL AS McLARNIN WHEN HE GOES AFTER THE WELTER TITLE. LEONARD, KILBANE, KETCHEL, WALKER AND SINGER ALL FAILED WHEN THEY WENT OUT OF THEIR CLASS.

OLD MAN PRECEDENT will have his thumbs down on the ambitious Mr. Barney Ross when the reigning lightweight champion of the world climbs through the ropes against the welterweight titleholder, Jimmy McLarnin. The dark-haired Jewish boxer with the repeat left hook will be essaying to turn a trick that has very seldom been accomplished. Think back a few years, and you recall the duels between two champions of different divisions that have occurred in recent times. Johnny Kilbane, a brilliant boxer with a paint brush left jab and a corking straight right, held the featherweight title a decade and a half ago; and John O. decided he wanted the lightweight crown as well. So he took on the lightweight champion, Bennah Leonard, and Ben proceeded to knock him kicking in short order. No dice for Mr. Kilbane. Then Mr. Leonard himself thought he could balance two crowns as easily as one on his noble noggin, and he got a fight with Jack Britton, then welter king. Bennah appeared to be on the way to victory when he committed an unpardonable social error by pasting Britton on the jaw while Jack was still on the canvas taking the count from a previous wallop. Result: Leonard lost on a foul. Mickey Walker, a great welterweight champion, made the mistake of thinking he could lick the middleweight king, Harry Greb, and was nearly annihilated in a one-sided 15-rounder when he tried it. Georges Carpentier held the light-heavyweight title when he was flattened by Jack Dempsey at Jersey City. Stanley Ketchel, greatest 160-lb. king of all time, was easy for heavyweight champion Jack Johnson. If Barney Ross can whip McLarnin, he will certainly be flouting a time-honored ring tradition.

Bucks County Tuberculosis Society

former is conducted each Tuesday; and the latter on the second Thursday of each month. The chest clinic at Abington Hospital is also used for examination of cases which come to the attention of Mrs. Stover. The tuberculosis cases are brought to the executive secretary's attention through schools, doctors and nurses, who refer the individuals to the society's agent. Follow-up work is also done in the home, and the society's representative also visits schools throughout the county giving health talks. In the homes where tuberculosis patients are found instruction is given as to the proper care and correct food; and advice given to have the patient isolated from the other members of the family with the utensils used by each kept separate. Talks are also given by Mrs. Stover before the Parent-Teacher Associations of the county, and other organizations, bearing on tuberculosis cases and prevention of such.

All monies derived from sales of Christmas sales in the county are kept for activities in the county, the funds being used to promote health work. The endeavor is county-wide, and the executive secretary is called to all sections of the area under her jurisdiction to give advice, talks; and to assist generally in t.b. cases.

When the sales of Christmas seals first started the work was under the jurisdiction of the American Red Cross. During the period of the World War the activity was turned over to the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society, with which society the county organization is affiliated. The county organization also functions in connection with the national Tuberculosis Society. Although the school children formerly sold the seals at the Yuletide season, this work was taken out of the schools at the request of the state association, which found that the mail sales were affected.

Other work carried on from the office of the executive secretary is the distribution of health pamphlets; news releases sent out once a week to county newspapers and societies interested; an "early diagnosis campaign" conducted each Spring through the press which advises visits to the physician and early care.

There are directors of the society located in many parts of the county, these including: Elmer E. Althous, Sellersville; Clifford L. Anderson, Bristol; Charles M. Baum, Perkasie; Mrs. Howard A. Clymer, Eureka; Dr. John A. Fell, the Rev. Charles F. Freeman, Dr. Harvard R. Hicks, Dr. Allen H. Moore, Joseph K. Musselman, A. S. Overpeck, the Rev. Bernard Repass, William H. Satterthwaite, Jr., Doylestown; Dr. A. J. Strathie, Newtown; Charles Meredith, Quakertown; Mrs. Stewart Hartzell, Chalfont; Miss Sarah Stately, Lahaska.

Tentative plans are being advanced for the anniversary dinner, marking 15 years of intense activity, this to take place next Fall.
